

Ilya Khaykin

Partner
Financial Services
Oliver Wyman

Ilya Khaykin is a Partner at Oliver Wyman's Financial Services practice with backgrounds in finance, physics, engineering and public policy. Ilya works with private sector financial institutions, development banks and regulatory bodies on issues of risk management, climate-related risk assessment, sustainability and other strategic topics.

Ilya led Oliver Wyman's work with the United Nations Environment Program and 16 banks to develop and pilot a methodology for analysis of climate transition risk and opportunities in bank corporate lending portfolios.

Ilya is responsible for developing Oliver Wyman's service offering to banking clients in the Americas on the topic of climate risk and has led our work with systemically important FIs on the issues of climate risk scenario analysis, integrating climate considerations in credit underwriting, climate-related limits and risk appetite.